two-thirds majority for the adoption of the resolution. In the absence of several members who were committed to support it, Representative Henry, of Texas, its author, was determined to prevent a vote. At 4 o'clock, after he had spoken for forty minutes, he asked unanimous consent to continue for one hour. Representative Shirley, of Kentucky, objected.

Representative Gaines, of West Virginia, then moved the previous question, and on a division the motion prevailed by the close vote of 61 to 61. To prevent a vote Mr. Henry made the point of no quorum, but before the Speaker could order the door closed and absentees brought in, Mr. Parker saved the day with a motion to adjourn, which was carried without opposition.

The resolution was vigorously defended by Representative Henry, of Texas; Representative Craig, of Alabama; and Representative Shirley, of Kentucky, who spoke strongly against it.

The first hour of the day's session was devoted to the reading of the President's conservation message, which was enthusiastically received by the Republicans and some of the Democrats. The House adjourned at 4 o'clock until to-morrow.

The Senate was not in session to-day.

MONDELL DECLINES

He Will Not Stand Sponsor for Taff's Conservation Bill.

Washington, D. C., January 14.—Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, chairman of the House Committee on Public Lands, has declined to stand sponsor for President Taft's bill designed to carry out his program for conservation of natural resources. He offered to introduce the measure "by request," but the offer was declined.

The administration bills were sent to Chairman Mondell from the White House to-day. He declined in connection with the message of the President, which was read in the House to-day.

Mr. Mondell's view of legislation that is carried through by the President, that he told his friends he would not be justified in presenting the bill in a manner that would give them his endorsement. Because he was chairman of the Committee on Public Lands he felt that he could not decline to introduce the bill, and so he declined to do so.

When Mr. Mondell's suggestion was communicated to the President, the word was received that it was not satisfactory to the administration. The President is said to have decided to see another bill introduced in connection with the conservation of natural resources. Mr. Mondell's suggestion is regarded as equivalent to congressional disapproval.

Authority to Investigate. Washington, D. C., January 14.—General authority for the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate and report to the country on the most efficient supplies constitutes the only legislation in the agricultural appropriation bill, which was reported to the House to-day by the Committee on Appropriations. It carries a total of $12,417,256, a net increase of $32,190 over the present appropriation. The cost of the investigation for which no specific appropriation is made is provided for in a brief item authorizing "the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate the cost of food supplies at the farm and to the consumer, and to disseminate the result of such investigation in what manner he may deem best. This authorization is to be effective on approval of this act."

The work of standardization of cotton has been completed, and estimates that 1,000 sets of samples to illustrate the standards for various grades of cotton will be called for this year. The bill allows $15,000 to enable preparation of these additional sets.

BALLOT BOXES OPEN FOR DEATH STRUGGLE

England's Great Parliamentary Election Campaign Closes, and To-Day May Spell Doom of One of Great Parties.

London, January 14.—To-night witnessed the close of the parliamentary election campaign. It has been fought on an issue entirely novel to the people of these times—an issue that has not been raised before for 300 years—and it has been fought with an intensity of conviction, energy and bitterness unparalleled in Great Britain in the present generation.

The conflict, that opens the ballot boxes to-morrow for the first general election since 1906 is a death struggle between the two great political parties in the state—the Conservatives and the Liberals. "Vote to protect the country," is the exhortation addressed to the people to-night by the leading Liberal orator, and it then succinctly portrays how the conflict presents itself to the Liberals. On the opposing side is ranging the influence of the Conservatives in support of the privileged classes.

As sample proof that the struggle is concentrated in the demand of the House of Commons for a limitation of the powers of the peers may be found in the fact that all attempts to make the rule and order of the House of Commons a subject of discussion in the House have proved unavailable. The British elector, as far as at present may be judged, declines to greatly concern himself with home rule and its alleged dangers. The two outstanding features of the campaign have been the determination of the Liberals to concentrate the attention of the people on the constitutional struggle involved in the attempt of the peers to control the House and the quick realization by the Conservatives that the rejection of the budget had been a mistake.

Picture Posters Used. The campaign has been notably beyond all previous election struggles in England in the enormous use of picture posters and similar devices. The tariff reformers even opened shops in different districts in order to display samples of foreign imports "dumped" into England. This led to amusing incidents, among them the discovery in one case that an alleged American chair really had been made in London.

The question of the cost of food in the United States and Germany also was illustrated in a similar manner. Neither side neglected any possible detail of the organization to insure victory.

As a final appeal to their constituents, Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain to-night issued a joint manifesto to the country. It says:

"Tariff reform will not increase the cost of living of the working classes nor the proportion of taxation paid by them, but it will enable us to reduce the present taxes on articles of working class consumption and develop our trade with British dominions beyond the seas."

Mr. Balfour also issued a brief manifesto saying:

"This is an election whose far-reaching importance no man can measure. The results must be for good or for evil, must effect the employment of our people, the security of our shores, and the greatness of our empire. May every citizen act as knowing that on him in part depends the issue of this great controversy."

Mr. Lloyd-George says:

"I hope the British electors will stand by the privileges nobly won by our ancestors and refuse to barter either the freedom of our institutions or commerce for the mess of thin porridge offered by the Conservatives."

In an election speech at Islington to-night, John Burns predicted that the next revolution would arise in the United States, owing to the protectionist system.

The report of the Finance Committee was adopted.

Appropriations of $175 for the almshouse and cemetery and an ordinance granting $500 for the almshouse, fire and water works and for clerical help were adopted, after the suspension of rules. The reports of the Street, Cemetery and Power Committee were received and filed. An itemized account from the almshouse showed the number of inmates to be fourteen and the cost of food for the inmates, etc., to total $112.33.

Mr. Waugh Appears. A. J. Waugh was next heard in the House in his property on Fourteenth Street next to the Fairbanks School. About three feet of his property abutted on the school, and Mr. Waugh asked the purchase from the city that it was moved and an additional space assured him complete possession of the whole. He stated his intention was to place a fence around his property and make a small passage through it. After deliberation pro and con the matter was referred to the Building and Land Committee.

Wakenfield called the attention of the committee to what he declared was the unbusinesslike way of the Virginia Railway and Power Company in failing to remit bills for street lights. The fiscal year, he said, ended February 1 and all bills should be settled by then. It was moved and carried that the clerk be instructed to send a communication requesting that all bills payable to January 31 be sent to the city.
